MUCH THERE IS TO HARM US

2. Why should they be fearful whom the Lord befriends?Should they not be cheerful, whom his arm defends?Who or what can harm them, objects of his love?What, then, should alarm them, shielded from above?

3. If his arm were shortened that it could not save, we might be disheartened – cause we then should have, were he deaf, and could not hear his people's prayer, were he changed, and would not, then we might despair.

4. But he changes never – still the same he is; trust him, then, for ever, well assured of this, he with strength provides us; he, from first to last; he from danger hides us till the storm is past.
