

- 2. This affords me consolation, all that I, a sinner, have;'tis thy love, thy free salvation,'tis thy grace, and pow'r to save.These are themes that make me glad, silent otherwise, and sad.
- 4. Now I look, through grace, to see thee, as thou art, in heav'n above; time there was, when I would flee thee, when I valued not thy love.

 But for grace, 'twould be so still, grace alone could change my will.

3. Thee, O Lord, I love to think of, good it is to think of thee.
When I stood upon the brink of ruin, thou didst think of me.
When all other doors were closed, then thy mercy interposed.

5. Thou hast done it; praise I give thee, but what shame belongs to me!
Saviour, let me cease to grieve thee, let me not unthankful be.
Take this evil heart of mine, take it, Lord, and make it thine.
