A CLEARER VIEW OF THINGS UNSEEN

- 2. How sad it is, that things which have so little worth, should valued be: should steal our hearts, and half enslave the freeman whom the Lord makes free.
- 3. But we are weak. Then help us, Lord; thy strength alone can help the weak, who, self-condemned and self-abhorred, thy mercy crave, thy blessing seek.
- 4. No strength have we, nor can we have, except it comes from thee alone. Thine arm, O Lord, is strong to save: this truth we feel, this truth we own.
- 5. Nor do we ask or wish to be dependant less upon thy power;'tis sweet to have our strength in thee. this keeps us in the trying hour.
- 6. And this will keep, in time to come. till conflict ends, and toil, and strife. This past, thy people gain their home; their portion, everlasting life.
