TO WHOM SHOULD THOSE IN TROUBLE FLEE?

- 2. When in the lowest depths we are, when all is grief, and all is care, we cry to thee, and not in vain; a word of thine relieves our pain.
- 3. 'Tis sweet to be assured of this, to taste the comfort sweeter is; but sweeter far, to reach the shore, where grief and trouble are no more.
- 4. To see the object of our love enthroned in majesty above;to see the angels own his claim;to hear the angels sound his name.
- 5. We look, not without hope, for this; for all is ours, if we are his: the Lord will "grace and glory" give; his people shall for ever live.
- 6. Yes, the delight of heav'n is theirs; from sorrow free, and free from cares; no conflicts there, no toil, no strife, a blessed and immortal life.
