

- 2. Love, who once, thy grace bestowing, chose me ere life's breath I drew; Love, who once, thy mercy showing, took my form and nature too; henceforth I myself resign, Love, to be for ever thine.
- 3. Love, who here on earth enduredst human sorrow, toil and pain; Love, who by thy death procuredst joy to me and endless gain; henceforth I myself resign, Love, to be for ever thine.
- 4. Love, who by thy Word and Spirit life and light to me revealed; Love, who 'gainst the wrath I merit art my soul's protecting shield: henceforth I myself resign, Love, to be for ever thine.

- 5. Love, to whom my will submitted, when I took thine easy yoke; Love, to whom my heart was knitted, when thy love its love awoke; henceforth I myself resign, Love, to be for ever thine.
- 6. Love, whose wondrous love eternal thee my willing Ransom made; Love, who at the throne supernal pleadest now that Ransom paid; henceforth I myself resign, Love, to be for ever thine.
- 7. Love, who wilt to heaven's bright story raise me from my sleep profound; Love, who with the Crown of Glory wilt at length my head surround; henceforth I myself resign, Love, to be for ever thine.

Words: Angelus Silesius, alias Johann Scheffler. Translation: Frances Elizabeth Cox. Music: Johannes Thomas Rüegg. Copyright © 2020 Johannes Thomas Rüegg. Source: www.christmysong.com/1514/