

2. Love, in all its strength and might, I will sing, and I will prove it; Love eternal! infinite! loveth me, and I will love it: all I am or hope to be, from that fount of life descending, riseth like a well in me, ever fresh, and never ending.

3. Sunbeams dancing on the sea, south winds blowing o'er the meadow, bird and blossom on the tree, summer shine, and summer shadow; outward glancings of the Love that within, in fadeless beauty, lights and leads my steps above up the rugged paths of duty.

4. Love! my God and King thou art! ever will I bow before thee: ever shall this grateful heart own thy kingdom and adore thee: neither life nor death can e'er from thy love, my Saviour, sever; love hath made the sinner dear, and that love endureth ever.
